Semio-Capital – A Day in the Life of Semiotic Operators
By Maurizio Lazzarato

I. All Developments are Semiotized

Imagine then a pure surface of society with semiotized operators, and even the future of a capitalist junk-yard which is these developments – something like 24x7 all over the place, I call this the future of capitalism unless it is stopped by the state machine and understood in history.

II. Desire is Infrastructure

In fact desire produces the infrastructure, I call it a monad each development – imagine the whole thing as monadic developments of the horizontal surface as integrated to the vertical capitalism – I call that semiotized operators.

III. Change this to History

Now imagine all of this as state history instead – something like a cathedral I have visited instead.
